ARC Programme - An Insight

The youth has a voice. We help them realise it.....

It is better to debate a question without settling it than to settle a question without debating it.

The well-known French moralist and essayist, Joseph Joubert has perfectly expressed SkillSphere Education's ideology in a succinct manner. A lot of us have grown up refraining from presenting our views in front of audiences for numerous reasons. These include stage fright, lack of conviction, inadequate opinion development and a hesitation to express. Getting rid of these shortcomings gets more difficult for us, once we grow up.

As we are well aware, school years provide us with the best opportunity to stand up and speak out. They offer us a plethora of opportunities to increase our exposure and self-belief. Among the various inter-school events, there are different types of public speaking events such as elocutions, declamations, extempore speech competitions, debates, case studies and Model United Nations conferences which are among the most valuable sources of exposure and skill set development. Each of these must be approached with a different mindset and students need to be trained differently for each of them.

ARC is SkillSphere Education's certified public speaking programme for school students of all age groups. Focusing on specifically helping students develop their public speaking skills and participate in a plethora of public speaking events at various levels, ARC is unique in its approach to oratory, expression and vocal delivery. It ensures that preparation and participation in every public speaking event takes place with the correct perspective and objective.

It provides individuals and institutions with an opportunity to train students correctly and comprehensively for successful participation in a range of public speaking events. The programme is conducted by some of the most renowned, reputed and established public speakers in the country.

Some of the popular public speaking formats for which SkillSphere Education provides structured and in-depth training through its ARC programme, include:

- Debates (of all formats)
- Elocutions, Recitations and Declamations
- Extempore Speaking and Just A Minute (JAMs)
- Model United Nations Conferences
- Group Discussions and Personal Interviews
- Presentations and Case Studies
- Public Speaking Activities Like Roleplay, Air Crash, No Cross Connection etc.

The main objective of ARC is to initiate students into the world of public speaking and make it second nature for them. While myriad other skill sets also get developed during the course of ARC, SkillSphere Education's biggest victory has been in seeing many students who initially suffered from stage fright, emerging victorious in national and international level public speaking events, after participating in the ARC programme.

Programme Details

ARC can be conducted as a short term as well as long term programme*. Additionally, it is also organized for training students for specific public speaking events based on the requirements of an institution or individual. The schedule and course structure vary accordingly. In general cases, ARC is divided into 4 levels based on age group. Each of these has a fixed, structured and well defined curriculum.

The levels are as follows:

- Level 1 (for students of 8 to 11 years old)
- Level 2 (for students of 12 to 14 years old)
- Level 3 (for students of 15 to 18 years old)
- Level 4 (for students of 18 years and above)

Each level focuses on training students for public speaking formats pertinent to the concerned age group. While some public speaking formats like debates are common to all levels, some others like Model United Nations start from Level 2 only. The different levels of ARC are independent of each other and ensure complete effectiveness of the programme for students of specific age groups. The training style and approach also vary level wise to cater to varying maturity levels of students of different age groups.

Course Structure

In the case of each level, the curriculum for the short term as well as the long term programme is the same. However, the approach and flow of the sessions in both cases is slightly different.

Each level comprises of sessions which are for a total of 15 hours. While it is also possible to take ARC training for a specific type of public speaking format such as a debate or elocution, it is highly recommended that students go through the entire training process for each level as we believe that every public speaking format is inter-related and a student can only become a complete orator and holistically developed public speaker if he/she excels in each of them.

Each public speaking format is dealt with differently and in a way best suited to it. The general pattern and flow of each session is as follows:

- Introduction to the rules, regulations and procedures of a public speaking format
- Advanced training, tips, nuances and pointers to master this public speaking format
- Practical sessions and intra-group competitions to apply the theoretical training

Ample time is dedicated to each of the public speaking formats that form a part of a particular level in order to ensure comprehensive learning for each of them.

One of the most attractive features of ARC is that every student gets a free assistance facility from SkillSphere Education in preparing for any public speaking event he/she decides to participate in, for an entire year subsequent to the completion of the ARC programme.

The long term ARC programme is available only at private centres of SkillSphere Education*
